Convert All That Negative “Worry” Energy into Positivism

A couple came over to me two months ago, and told me that they are having total stress since their 24-year-old son cannot get a Shidduch; nothing seems to work. I told them to convert all that negative “worry” energy into positivism. They would have a daily 5-minute Seder with each other.

In these 5 minutes, they would tell a Lebedik imaginary story about how their son suddenly found a “Glick” (fantastic) Shidduch. They laughed and joked about which hall the Chasuna would be, what type of invitations, and which guests to invite. They discussed all the Geshmake details; the beautiful Mitzva Tantz, etc.

After four weeks, things suddenly started moving. And two months after they started their Seder, their son had a Mazal Tov. I've done this many, many, times, and it's magic. A broken-hearted parent called me about a son who spends all day doing “unmentionable” things. This parent called me many times, and couldn't stop crying.

I advised keeping away from the child, and to laugh and joke (between yourself and Hashem) about what a real Tzaddik this boy is, with all the details. In two weeks, the boy became much more “smiley” and happy. He started going back to Yeshiva, and he made a major turnaround, full of Torah and Yiras Shamayim.

Focus On the Chazal That Gives You Chizuk and Simcha

Today, I was given loads of Kavod, and I wondered how to react. Maybe since I'm getting so much Kavod in this world, this is: וְיִשְׁלַם לְשִׁנְאָיו אֶל פְּנָיו

When You Feel Like Kvetching, Davka Go Extreme with Overtime Thankfulness

The Passuk by Bikkurim says וְעִנִּית וְאָמַרְתָּ כֹה Rashi says וְעִנִּית means: הִרְמַת קוֹל to raise your voice. The Sifsei Chachomim notes that normally: עָנָה means to “reply” or “respond” to a call or a question, but no one called him or asked anything, therefore Rashi translates it as: הִרְמַת קוֹל raising your voice. We can suggest an alternative reason why Rashi explains that the Passuk means Davka a Lashon of: קוֹל רָם “raising your voice”: יֵצֵר לֵב הָאָדָם רַע מִנְּעֻרָיו נִחַח כֹּא since a person is born with pessimism, and our Yetzer Hara loves to kvetch, so we need to overpower it by going extreme with: קוֹל דְּיָנִי dynamic and passionate thankfulness! There is no question that we all need to go overtime with thankfulness, and even for tiny *Chasadim, since the Yetzer Hara is so strong in the opposite direction.

So keep SCREAMING all day how happy you are, or take a full hour once in a while, and write 100 “Thank You’s” for recent Chasdei Hashem. If you aren't extreme in thankfulness, it may not help you much.

TRUE STORY

A Yungerman who is quite successful, yet he tells me that he has loads of issues because of his turbulent youth, OCD, bipolar, empty feelings, and all kinds of panic attacks, etc. Without even listening to all the details of his miserable life, I told him that I suspect that... all his problems are grossly exaggerated.

I have had several cases of serious mental issues, where I told the person that it was a misdiagnosis, and the person had Yeshuos simply by looking at himself differently. I told this Yungerman that I suspect that he has already seen many people besides me, and every time he repeats his issues, they become more real in his mind, and they can therefore worsen.

R' Avigdor Miller Zatzal didn't verbalize negative feelings about himself. You keep praising yourself, and insisting you are okay (even when you don't feel so great) and with time, you actually improve. Your body listens to your words, and it reacts accordingly. With patience, you can have major Yeshuos!

Mitzvos in this world, instead of the true reward in Olam HaBah, Chas V'shalom. Or maybe Aderaba, it's a sign how much Hashem loves me, since Chazal say that if a person is well liked by people, it's a sign that he's also well liked in Shamayim.

A person needs to focus on the Chazal that makes him come out ahead. If it makes you depressed and discouraged, then that way of thinking is a Yetzer Hara in a frum disguise, and it's not for you. And if it gives you Chizuk and Simcha, this is for you, and you'll indeed end up doing more, since you're full of Chi'yus and good feeling.

However, when you see others getting extra Kavod, and you have a Kin'ah problem, then it's K'dai (worthwhile) not to be Nis'pael, and realize that this person may be losing tons of Olam HaBah. The Chovos Halvavos says that a person should play down other people's Mazal. For example, an Ani (poor person) should look down at an Ashir (rich person) and a Bachur should look down at the married people. (Of course, an Ashir and a married person have to see only the good side of their situation.)

Novardok

R' Chaim Langleben Zatzal told me that the #1 Avoda is not to have Ka'as. Having Ka'as actually means having a cruel Lev, which is typical: יצר לב האדם רע מנערו inborn negativity. The more you work on it, the more you become a Rachamim person like Hashem. (In Breslov they say that Rachamim is the opposite of Ka'as. When you pity a person, it stops you from your anger towards him.)

Don't look Down at Yourself Because Of Your Yetzer Hara – Aderaba!

People look down at themselves when they feel a strong Yetzer Hara. But really, every Yid should value himself and say: גדול ממני there is no one greater than me; precisely because I have such difficult Nisyonos. And: גדול הימנו סוכה נבא the greater the person, the greater his Yetzer Hara. View yourself as a person who is much higher than your present weakness, and say: How could such a Chashuva person like me fall like this? You should always feel as if the real “you” is much greater than what's happening now.

R' Chatzkel Levenstein says: ה' ישען באלקיו the true Y'rei Shamayim is the: one who walks in “darkness”, i.e., has no Hatzlacha in Torah and Tefila, yet he has Bitachon to overcome everything. Yosef HaTzaddik told Eishes Potiphar: איננו I am the greatest person in this house! Chazal and the Meforshim say that he was almost Nichshal in Aveira. We can suggest that this is a Remez: איננו גדול ממני “Since I have such a serious Nisayon, it is a proof of my greatness” (and a person isn't given a Nisayon that he can't overcome).

It's Okay to Fall and Have Difficult Moments

The Alter had tremendous plans of building many Yeshivos and doing Zikkui HaRabbim. He was very unsuccessful, and when he visited Kelm he was on a low. People asked him: “What happened to your Bitachon you had in accomplishing so much??”

The Alter from Kelm noticed his plight, and when he gave a Shmuess, he said nothing besides repeating many times: די לוי באשר הוא חי How can a person complain if he is alive?? Isn't that enough Chesed, just being alive? The Alter said that this Shmuess changed his life completely! He had His'orerus in the great fortune of being alive. Later on, he became super successful building thirty or more Yeshivos. The Velt says: Thankful hearts are close to the riches of the universe.

This story teaches us that it's okay to fall and feel low once in a while. He was a Tzaddik Yesod Olam, and known to be an extremely happy person with his phenomenal Madrega in Bitachon. (He had no fear to build Yeshivos in middle of WWI with bombs flying all over!). Yes, like all human beings, even HE had his difficult moments. We are not Malachim!
